

STYLE & GRACE

Perfectly Pinto

Famed Chicago fashion designer Maria Pinto brings her edgy Windy City style to Silicon Valley.

Maria Pinto's career started when she worked with the legendary Geoffrey Beene in New York. She later made a name for herself in Chicago creating fashions worn by socialites and celebrities, including Oprah Winfrey and Brooke Shields.

Architectural Edge

Most recently, Pinto has launched a new line titled M2057 by Maria Pinto, a ready-to-wear collection inspired by urban architecture and design. It is simultaneously minimalist, flattering, functional, and virtually wrinkle-free. Pinto's aim, she states, "is to give women fashion that is chic, versatile, and fits all types of bodies and styles." As a longtime client once said, "Wearing Maria's clothes makes me look and feel like the best version of myself." With that in mind, it's no wonder that Pinto's recent pop-up shop at Digital Garage (717 Market Street, San Francisco) was a huge success with the chic tech crowd. In case you missed it, visit www.m2057.com.

